WASHINGTON, Oct. 28. The impression prevails here among military men that the recent demonstrations of the Confederates near Yorktown and Williamsburg indicate a purpose on their part of occupying in The only cause which would induce them to do leaders that Richmond is going to be attacked again from that direction.

The rebels are by no means slow of comprehension, and they have no doubt a perfect un derstanding of these facts; and their recent move ments near Williamsburg are probably the first steps towards obtaining again such a footbold on the lower Peninsula as will make it difficult for us to dislodge them. Exchanged prisoners and other persons from Richmond describe the gigantic preparations which have been made near that city to prevent the approach of a hostile fleet. According to these statements the whole of the river be tween Fort Darling and Richmond is filled with obstructions of various kinds, of which old hulks FOR THE U. S. It is given out here that we have such a force there. On that point I say nothing except that it will be shameful if it prove that we have not. I know that in my letters written last spring, after the rebels had abandoned to us the territory through which the Baltimore and Ohio railroad runs, I urged the importance of guarding that road by an adequate force. The adminis tration organs ridiculed the idea, then, of the rebels ever again coming so far north; and it was stated and reiterated that the road was guarded by an adequate force. Yet look at the subsequent history of the road, and look at the road now. Is it not disgraceful that the great West-

But to return to the Peninsula A proper number of Union troops at Yorktown and Gloucester Point could successfully defend those places, because the works all around them, erected by the rebels, still remain, and will probably remain for generations, monuments of Magruder's engineering skill. But the case is different at Williamsburg, and it is to be regretted that it is so. Williamsburg is quite as important as a strategic point as Yorktown; perhaps more so. A good map of the Peninsula will show that Williamsburg is about in the narrowest part of the former. The rebel forts, indeed, on the 5th of May last, as I well remember, extended entirely across from the York to the James river. being thirteen in number, and the distance across being not quite seven miles. But the trouble is. the forts, like Pillow's ditch, are all on the wrong side of the town. If the Confederates should march to attack Williamsburg from New Kent (as it is stated to day that they are marching).

And it is stated that, although the Pamunkey River (the continuation of the York River) was unobstructed a few days ago, it is not so now. It is said that a fort is being erected on the high bluff on the right bank of the Pamunkey, a short distance below White House, and some batteries near West Point. If these reports are true, it shows that the Confederates are inclined to prevent as from using the Pamunkey and the upper York River in transporting our troops. they expect to prevent the passage of our iron-While the rebels are thus active on the land, they are by no means idle on the sea. The rumors that they have been building a fleet of powerful iron clad steamers in England turns out to be a fact. The destination of this fleet has not yet transpired. But there are some New York merchants now here who express fears for the safety of the commerce of that city which are by no means unfounded. I wo vessels arrived in New York, one on the 26th and the other on the 27th inst., both of which were loaded with valuable cargoes, and both of which were chased by the rebel steamer Alabama, and barely escaped capture. It is easy to see that this is but the commencement of very serious naval troubles. It has been abundantly proved that our Navy Department is utterly powerless to prevent the constant violation of the blockade of the Southern ports; for it is known to be a fact that the greater part of the rebel army is being supplied with winter clothing of foreign manufacture. And now comes the additional fact that our navy is powerless to protect our own commerce from the depredations of the rebels. Truly, this little affair of putting down the rebellion has assumed somewhat large proportions. General Order No. 113.

From Boston. Boston, Nov. 2 - The brig Baron de Castine arrived here. She reports that on the 29th ult. in lat. 39 deg. long. 69 deg., she was captured by the British pirate Alabama. Captain Semmes agreed to liberate the vessel for a bond of $6,000. payable to the President of the Confederate States in thirty days peace is declared. The Captain was also obliged to take the crews of several vessels previously captured, which he did and landed them at the nearest port.

Among other vessels captured by Captain Semmes was the ship Tonawanda from Philadelphia for Liverpool with passengers. After detaining her five days he released her for a bond of $8,000 Most of the vessels captured were burnt and the crews put in irons. A captured Captain was informed by a Lieutenant and several petty officers of the Alabama that their next destination was New York as they meant to throw a few shells into the city. He represents the Alabama as very formidable but amme it before the sale doubts her being as fast as reported. Two large pivot guns were being mounted. The Captain of the ship Lafavette reports when he met Semmes he showed him his British Con sular certificate and remarked he supposed that was sufficient protection. Semmes replied that New Yorkers were getting smart but it won't save you. It's a damned hatched up mess, and ordered the ship to be burned.

In the afternoon the crowd again collected in large numbers around the jail but no demonstation of any consequence was made. About seven P M the mob again assembled and proceeded to the jail with two swivels for the purpose of breaking down the jail doors and dragging Brown out to be executed.

The guns were captured by the police; a few shots fired; four persons wounded, one severely At 10 P. M. all comparatively quiet. The Mayor early in the evening telegraphed Gen. Wright for military force to assist him in preserving peace, and at 816 o'clock five companies of regulars left the city and arrived at Dayton at 10 P. M.

The Enquirer says a gentleman who arrived from Dayton at 912 last night states that the parties had a political quarrel before the election, and Brown threatened to shoot Bollmeyer; that the killing of the dog was only the indirect cause the rencontre yesterday.
